INDUSTRY COLLABORATION TEAM (ICT)

The Gynecologic Oncology Group (GOG) is a National Cancer Institute (NCI) cooperative clinical trial research group funding clinical research in the field of gynecologic cancer. The purpose and mission of the GOG is to improve and expand the treatment of gynecologic cancer. These goals are met through an exchange of information on programs of study, teaching methods and research activities among gynecologic oncologists, medical oncologists, radiation oncologists, nurse oncologists, pathologists, and basic scientists. Today, GOG consists of 60 nationally known "parent" institutions, medical schools, colleges and universities with approximately 264 affiliate institutions.

What is the Industry Collaboration Team?

The ICT is an exciting GOG membership program designed and developed to foster and facilitate a two-way communication channel between Industry and the GOG. The GOG strives to build a strong partnership with Industry in order to serve as their research and collaboration partner, paving the way for advancement in the field of gyn oncology.

The ICT provides:

- Provides the opportunity to establish a two-way communication channel between industry and the GOG;
- For a more rapid accumulation of information for pooling knowledge by multidisciplinary organizations and industry;
- Fosters interaction between leaders in oncology and industry;
- An opportunity to extend information about new and improving technologies, equipment, products, and services to professionals working in gynecologic cancer research;
- All company employees receive the benefit of ICT reduced fees for registration, badge, symposium and scientific session;
- No registration deadline for Semi Annual Meetings; and
- Member contacts can be updated/revised at anytime during the membership year in writing to us.
